1. Otto Grotewohl had thoughts of postponing his leave to the coming winter or learning the facts of the Bernnde Conference. On 10 November, he had a talk with Walter Ulbricht who had just returned from the USSR. Immediately after that talk Grotewohl said that he had to leave without delay and gave orders for a special plane to be made available to him through the good offices of the Soviet High Commission. From this, Grotewohl's entourage inferred that Ulbricht had communicated to him an invitation or summons to Moscow.

25X1 2. [REDACTED] Ulbricht managed to improve his standing in Moscow. It was particularly noted that during a short talk between Ulbricht and Semenov the latter was much more polite than on previous occasions. Another proof of the firm position Ulbricht regained may be seen in the fact that he and not Heinrich Fau became acting prime minister during Grotewohl's absence.
